SALE OF LOTS
IN THE TOWN OF GRANGER.

TOWN LOTS will be offered at PUBLIC SALE on the 29th day of MAY next, on the PREMISES. A small part of the purchase money will be required in hand, and a liberal credit for the remainder. Settlers making certain improvements within given periods, will have a deduction on the price of the property, on which they improve. Mill-wrights, Ship-wrights, Carpenters, Masons, Brickmakers and Bricklayers, as well as Labourers are invited. Granger is situated on the west bank of the Bay, and near the Lake shore at the mouth of Rocky River, Cuyahoga County, State of Ohio. The fine harbour for vessels of burthen, the fisheries, with many other natural and geographical advantages, few Towns on the south side of Lake Erie, if any, can vie—the adjoining country is fertile, fine water, gentle ascents and descents, seats for mills and other works are numerous on durable head streams of water—the settlement progressing beyond any reasonable supposition. Last November a sale was held on the premises, where considerable Lots were sold, several of which will be improved this season, and now, at the solicitation of several who wish to purchase property for settling, the proprietors are induced to offer such portion as will answer those who incline residing at that place.

The Paris papers contain the following from Madrid, dated Feb. 17:—"All the subjects of his Catholic Majesty are invited to arm against the corsairs of the insurgents of America."

The depredations of the Barbary corsairs along the coast of Italy continue. They lately made a descent with a force of 500 men at Morseno, plundered the churches and houses, and carried off a great number of captives.

Among the items in the civil list accounts, are, a sum of 3,063l. 12s. 6d. for equipage to the Hon. C. Bagot, our Minister to America.

Ad. Plamplin, it is said, is to have the command at St. Helena, in the room of Sir G. Cockburn.

The ministers from France, Austria, Bavaria, Holland, Brussels, Prussia and Portugal, were the parties who were presented with diplomatic snuff boxes, which cost the nation 15,310l. 15s.

The whole charge of keeping Bonaparte in St. Helena, is stated at 300,000l. per year.

The Emperor has addressed the following letters to the two Metropolitans of the Russian Church:

Venerable Metropolitan of Novgorod and St. Petersburg, Ambrosius!

On my first entrance into the capital of France, I wished to mark that termination of the holy war with the memorial of the religion which conquers the world, to the honor of its great head, Christ the Saviour, who gives and crowns the victory. With this view I now send to you the cups prepared at Paris by my orders, which are used by our orthodox church in the celebration of the Sacrament of the Supper. Place them on the altar of the Cathedral of the Holy Mother of God, at the steps of which I began and concluded the journey which has been so graciously favoured by Providence.

(Signed) ALEXANDER.

Previously, on the 18th December, the Emperor had sent the following to the Archbishop of Moscow:

Venerable Archbishop Augustine!—The herewith accompanying cups, I dedicated to the Cathedral Church of Moscow. May the offering serve as a memorial that they were wrought in the capital of that enemy, who, by the wonderful power of the Almighty, was driven from the interior of our native country!

DEATH AND FUNERAL OF YOUNG PLATOFF.

From Labaume's Narrative of the Campaign in Russia.

"From the commencement of the campaign, the son of the Hetman Platoff, mounted on a superb white horse, from Ukraine, was the faithful companion in arms of his brave father, and always at the head of the Cossacks. He was often remarked by our advanced guards, on account of his courage and intrepidity. This fine young man was the idol of his father, and the hope of the warlike nation which expected hereafter to obey him. But destiny had pronounced his doom, and the fatal hour was at hand. In a desperate charge of cavalry, which took place near Vercia, between Prince Ponitowski and the Hetman Platoff, the Poles and Russians, animated by a mutual hatred, fought with fury. Excited by the ardour of the combat, they gave no quarter, and on both sides fell numerous brave men, who had returned in safety from former battles. Platoff, who saw his best soldiers falling around him, forgot his own danger, and with an anxious eye, looked round for his favorite son. But the moment approached, when this unfortunate father was destined to feel that life is sometimes almost insupportable. The unhappy youth had returned from the heat of battle, and, was preparing to renew the attack when he received a mortal wound from a Hulan Pole.

"At this moment his father appeared, and flying to his assistance, threw himself upon him. On seeing his beloved parent the son heaved a deep sigh, and would have expressed, for the last time, his affection and his duty; but, as he attempted to speak, his strength failed him, and he breathed his last. In the mean time Platoff, who could not restrain his tears, retired to his tent, to give vent to his feelings. In the first burst of agony he considered life a burden, and could no longer endure the light. The following morning, at daybreak, the chiefs of the Cossacks came to express their grief, and earnestly request that they might be permitted to render funeral honors to the son of their Hetman. Every one, on seeing this brave young man stretched on a bear-skin, knelt spontaneously, and respectfully kissed the hand of a youth who, but for a premature death, would have equalled the greatest heroes, by his valour and by his virtues. After having, according to their ritual, offered fervent prayers for the repose of his soul, they removed him from the presence of his father, and carried him in solemn procession to a neighbouring eminence covered with cypress, where he was to be interred.

"The Cossacks, standing around, all ranged in order of battle, observed a religious silence, and bowed their heads in profound respect, while grief was painted in every countenance. At the moment when the earth was forever to separate them from the son of their prince, they fired a volley over the grave. Afterwards, holding their horses in their hands, they slowly and solemnly marched round the tomb, with their lances pointed towards the earth."

SINGULAR ESCAPE.

The following is from a Dublin paper: A Roman Catholic clergyman when on his way home to a village in the county of Cavan, was accosted in the evening by a man on horseback, who asked the clergyman to recommend him to lodgings.—The man pretended to be afraid to stop at the house the priest recommended, as it was full of Orangemen. The priest offered a bed and a place for his horse, at his own residence, to which the stranger assented; and after taking some refreshment, they retired to their apartments. The man servant of the clergyman having occasion to go into the stranger's bed-chamber before he had gone to bed, observed under his great coat a blunderbuss. On quitting the room, which he did instantly, he went to his master, and told him he did not like the appearance of his guest, that he was armed, and probably had bad intentions.—His master, upon this statement, desired him not to go to bed, but to arm himself with a pitchfork, and set up in the kitchen; while he at the same time loaded a case of pistols, and sat up reading, to beguile the time. In the dead of the night the priest's door was opened, and the man whom he had sheltered entered the room, presented the blunderbuss, and desired him to deliver his money, or he would shoot him; the clergyman requested he would put down the blunderbuss lest it should actually go off, and that he would show him what money he had; the priest then threw on the table a few ten-pennies, saying that was all the money he had; on which the other replied, he knew he had plenty of money, and that he came for the purpose of getting it, and that if he had not brought him to his house, he would have that night broken into it. The priest then told him what money he had was in the desk that stood in the corner of the room, and, putting his hand in his pocket took out the key, which he threw on the table; during the time he had been in the room, the ruffian was threatening him with immediate destruction, however, he took up the key, laid down the blunderbuss, and went towards the desk, when the priest drew one of the pistols, fired at him, and killed him on the spot! The moment the report of the shot was heard, the hall door was forced in, and four men entered and rushed into the room; the priest collected for the worst event, took up the blunderbuss, when he heard the crash of the door, and firing amongst them as they entered, killed two, and a third with the reserved pistol; the servant attacked the fourth with the pitchfork, and inflicted a wound in his back, but he unluckily escaped.

A STRANGE CASE.

The marriage of the Prince Cobourg, to her royal highness Charlotte (whenever that Princess ascends the throne of her ancestors,) will afford a phenomenon in legislation and in law. The husband will be the subject of the wife, and have, in virtue of his marriage, no more power than any other subject of the realm. His wife will be adorned with the title and dignity of her royal majesty,—wield the whole executive power of Great Britain; dictate the movements of the armies and the fleets: convoke or dissolve Parliament at her pleasure—while the poor husband will be compelled to look on, without having any agency in the business. It becomes the husband to behave himself well, and to keep his proper distance, for such a state of things might exist, that this very spouse might, if he should treat his sovereign wife with disrespect, be bro't to the block for "compassing and imagining the death" of her royal majesty. Such tremendous wives would not be relished by every husband. This is at least a departure from the old proverb that, the husband should always wear the breeches; he is almost literally a husband in petticoats. Balt. Tel

The Waterloo Museum, Pall-Mall, can now enumerate upwards of one thousand articles of the highest interest, collected together to record the most memorable event that ever occurred in the annals of this country. There have been deposited here within these few days, a number of dress swords found in Bonaparte's equipage, ready to be presented to those men who might have distinguished themselves in the battle in which he lost forever his empire and former fame; also, a very curious badge of office worn by General Count Sorbiesse, the grand huntsman of this court: and a standard of exquisite beauty, the embroidery of which cost an immense sum. It had been presented by Bonaparte to the troops which accompanied him from Elba. This collection is now, without doubt, the most valuable and splendid exhibition of any kind, that was ever presented to public notice.

The man who drove Bonaparte's coach at the battle of Waterloo is now in London, having recovered from the numerous wounds which he received in the attempt to escape from the scene of action. On his arrival in London he went to view the horses which drew the celebrated carriage, and scarcly knew them as they were in such good order; Bonaparte, it is said, would not allow them to be put in a stable, to make them used to hardships.

The British government has prohibited the exportation of gunpowder, salt petre, arms and ammunition, to Spanish America.

VANITY AND FLATTERY—A VISION

I imagined that I was in the midst of an immense crowd, who were eagerly pressing towards a large edifice, situated upon the summit of a lofty hill. Finding it impossible to retreat, I quietly suffered myself to be borne along by the violence of the multitude, till I arrived at what I found, on a nearer survey, to be a temple. On entering it, the first object which attracted my attention was a figure seated on a throne, and adorned with the ensigns of sovereignty. Her head was encircled by a fillet, which reflected all the colours of the rainbow, and every moment the light tissue of her drapery presented a thousand hues to the eyes of the beholder. But what most surprised me was the facility with which she changed not only the form and colours of her robes, but even their texture. At one moment she was arrayed in the light drapery of a city belle; at another, in the coarse habiliments of a justice beauty. Now she assumed the dress and manner of a secluded student; and now appeared in all the magnificence of a courtier. Her waist was encircled with a zone studded with the wings of a butterfly; in her left hand she held a mirror, and with her right she waved a sceptre of irons.

One step lower, upon her right hand, sat a person whose sole occupation appeared to be to pour out a liquid into a golden cup, which ever and anon he presented to the lips of his sovereign. The appearance of this personage was not less singular than that of her to whom he was ministering. His form was shrouded by a veil of splendid whiteness, but altho' at first glance it dazzled the eyes of those who ventured to behold it, yet it could not conceal from the penetrating observer the deformity it was intended to cover.

Struck with amazement at this scene, and at beholding the innumerable crowds which bent the knee to this capricious and ever-varying sovereign, I could not refrain from asking some explanation from a person whose dark and animated eye appeared to be the index of intelligence. The stranger readily complied with my request, and quickly glancing his eye over the crowd as he spoke "You behold," said he, "a motley collection from every nation in the world, assembled to proclaim their obedience to the empire of Vanity. She is the offspring of Pride and Folly, and has inherited the arrogance of the one and the weakness of the other. She possesses an unbounded sway over mankind, and influences their conduct in almost every pursuit in which they engage. But the constant state of imbecility in which she is kept by drinking the intoxicating draught which is presented by her attendant, renders almost all her measures injurious to her subjects; and there are few indeed who do not suffer want and wretchedness in consequence of their being under the dominion of Vanity." And who, said I, is the attendant? "His name," replied my informer, "is Flattery. He is the prime minister of Vanity, and though he may appear to your eyes to be perfect deformity, yet so little is the penetration of his sovereign, that to her he appears beautiful as an inhabitant of the heavens."

He had scarcely spoken these words, when a confused noise was heard at the entrance of the temple, and the cry of "Justice" resounded from every quarter. At the sound the cup trembled in the hands of Flattery, and the sceptre of Vanity fell from her grasp. Flattery attempted to conceal himmself among the crowd, but a band of Lictors, advancing, seized him, chained him side by side with Vanity, and conducted both before the tribunal of Justice and Mercy. Impelled by curiosity to see what would be the sentence pronounced upon these culprits, who had so long been permitted to tyrannize over mankind, I followed the crowd, and entered the abode of those primeval judges of mankind.

The trumpet of Judgment resounded through the hall, "Who is the accuser of the tyrant and her minion?" In a moment the roof burst in twain, and a celestial form descended: brightness encircled her head, and upon her breast was inscribed in letters of flame, "Truth, the first and darling attribute of the Almighty." "I am the accuser," said the celestial visitant, "but I accuse not Vanity—I accuse him who has been the cause of her crimes; Vanity would never have caused misery, unless Flattery had first inebriated her with his fascinating cup." Justice rose from her throne: "I condemn," said she, "the tyrant to wander in exile an outcast from society; for her failings, though destructive to mankind, have been those of weakness rather than of malice. But the iniquitous partner in her guilt I condemn to instant death." All eyes were now eagerly directed to the countenance of Mercy. The venerable judge arose, mildness beamed from her countenance, and, as she spoke, her words were tempered with a smile. "I do not blame," said she, "the decision of Justice, but the object may be accomplished without so much rigor. It is enough to strip Flattery of the dazzling veil which shrouds his deformity, and to restrain him from offering the cup of intoxication. It is enough to condemn Vanity to behold the hideous form of her sycophant, and to subject her to the tormenting desire of that cup which it is no longer in her power to receive."

Thus Mercy spake, and immediately her orders were executed. The cup was dashed from the hand of Flattery, and the veil was torn from his countenance. But, no sooner had Vanity beheld him in his native deformity, than she uttered a cry of such horror, mingled with despair, that I awoke with the fright that it occasioned.

BEAUTY.

Socrates calls it short lived tyranny; Plato, the privilege of nature: Theophrasius, a mute eloquence: Diogenes, the best letter of recommendation: Carneades, a queen without soldiers: Theocritus, a serpent covered with flowers: Bion, a good, that does not belong to the possessor, because it is impossible to give one's self beauty or preserve it.—After this scientific display of quotations, all bristled with Greek names, may be added the definition of a modern author, who calls it—"a bait that as often catches the fisher as the fish."

The subscriber cautions the public not to purchase any Notes of his in favour of Thomas Mitchell, of Moon township, Allegheny county, as they will be to collect according to law—his treatment to me deserves such.

Large speculations for the purpose of selling over the mountains, having drained the necessary supplies of Tallow from the market, obliges him to apologise for his present inability to supply the demand for Candles. He hopes his friends will see the necessity of prompt payment, in order to prevent in future such a procedure, to counteract which is indispensably necessary, as it is a fact beyond doubt that the markets at the most productive seasons are barely sufficient to meet the increasing wants of the inhabitants, in an article so necessary.

SATURDAY, MAY 18, 1816.

Mission to Naples.—In a late paper we mentioned, that Mr. Pinkney in addition to his embassy to Russia had been appointed minister extraordinary to Naples. The object of this mission to Naples is not generally known. From a late Norfolk paper we extract the following relative to it:

"Under the Berlin and Milan decrees, and another, issued from a place which we now forget, (perhaps Fontainbleau) Murat, then King of Naples, and Bonaparte, "Vice Roy over him," seized and appropriated to his and his master's use, a large amount of American property; this might be in the years 1807 and 1808. This affair has been suffered to sleep ever since, not a whisper of complaint was made, so long as Napoleon was Emperor, and Murat was King; they, who pocketed the cash. The present King of Naples, was in exile, while his revenues, and the money of our merchants, were used for "splendid" expeditions to Russia, and other righteous purposes.

Our administration did not think it right to interrupt Napoleon with our complaints, while he was so usefully employed, but now that a king and government, who did us no injury, are in power, we demand redress. We are not urging this as wrong, but only mean to say, that the delay to demand redress was wrong."

As our government has commenced, we hope it will not fail to demand redress for a series of lawless insults and injuries received from Spain. A war with that power is infinitely less to be deprecated than submission to her numerous aggressions.

The Hon Samuel Dexter of Boston, late democratic candidate for governor of Massachusetts, died suddenly at Athens, in the state of New York, on the night of the 3d inst.

New York Election.—In the city of New York, Rufus King had a majority of 65 votes over Daniel D. Tompkins for Governor. It is probable, however, Mr. Tompkins is re-elected.

An expedition of 16 vessels, (carrying each from 2 to 16 guns) having on board about 4000 Spanish Patriot seamen and marines, under General Bolivar, sailed from Aux Cayes in company with the Adrastus, (arrived at Boston)—destination unknown, but generally supposed against St. Domingo city.

CONNECTICUT ELECTION.

The Editor of the Albany Register remarks, that the mingling of religion and politics, in the late elections of New Hampshire and Connecticut, gives a new feature to the political aspect of those states. We hope it may not be productive of mischief; but we frankly confess, that it has more than once brought to our recollection what Swift once said of a similar state of things in England:

"When faction was loud, and party ran high,
"Religion and Liberty joined in the cry;
"But oh! grief of griefs! in the midst of the fray,
"Religion and Liberty both ran away!"

Whether Swift had a prospective view of things, when he wrote these couplets, or not, we shall not undertake to say.

United States Exports.—By a late report from the Treasury Department, the whole exports of the United States for the last year, exceeded 52 millions of dollars, of which, near 46 millions were domestic products, and six and a half millions were of foreign articles.

The Washington, 74, Com. Chauncey, now ready for sea at Boston, is ordered we understand, to proceed to Annapolis, preparatory to taking out to Naples the Honorable William Pinkney, our new appointed minister plenipotentiary to the court of St. Petersburgh, and minister extraordinary to the court of Naples.

SPECIE RETURNING.

A late arrival at Baltimore from Leghorn brings 30,000 Spanish dollars.

A late English paper is said to contain an account, that during an earthquake at Teneriffe, several large spars branded "United States," were driven on shore, supposed to belong to some American cruizer which had foundered off the Island. [The Wasp was in the vicinity of Teneriffe, the last time she was heard of.]

Patent Provisions are prepared in England.—Fresh provisions are put in canisters and so preserved, that they have been known to keep sweet and good for two years. A great number of certificates in their favour from respectable persons are given. Preserved milk is also in repute for long voyages.

FRENCH AFFAIRS.

The French Deputies being about to have a recess, have pubished a Declaration of their sentiments, replete with a high degree of good sense and moderation. They solemnly promise to adhere to the constitutional charter; to protect the rights of property as they now exist; to support the family on the throne in the maintenance of these principles; and to defend the interests of religion.

Bos. Cent.

The editor of the London Courier, of the 28th of March, gives a report from Paris, of the Austrian army having re-entered France, on the 13th of that month —The Courier disbelieves the report.

A letter from Washington, to the editor of the Star of Federalism, says,— "You would have been considerably amused to observe the zeal displayed when the Whiskey Tax came under consideration, how lively some of the members got upon the subject, and with what spirit they spoke. On this question the Kentucky members seemed to feel themselves quite at home—some of them gave double proof arguments that government was often defrauded by the artifices of water distillers, and displayed a wonful degree of practical knowledge on the subject, but others of them poor fellows could not get much above the low winds of discussion.—I did not observe, as Mr. Ingersoll once did, when this subject was under discussion, many wry faces, but I thought when the pure double distilled whiskey was spoken of, that a great many of the members looked very thirsty."

From the Providence Gazette of April 3.

FIRE IN THE WOODS.

Early in the forenoon of Wednesday last, a fire commenced in Johnston, on land belonging to Mr Sweet, in consequence of the injudicious burning of brush at a season when all nature is ripe for combustion. The fire, aided by the wind and the drought, was very rapid and extensive in its progress, ravaging, in the course of a few hours, more than a thousand acres of land, covered with young thrifty wood and heavy timber. Several hundred cords of fuel wood, prepared for market, were entirely consumed, and the growth of timber very materially injured. The amount of damage sustained by farms and lots, in Johnston, North Providence, and Smithfield, cannot at present be ascertained with sufficient precision to justify an estimate. The most strenuous and disinterested efforts were made by the inhabitants of those towns (assisted by a number from this) to rescue the surrounding woodland from a general conflagration. To these efforts is in a great measure to be attributed the preservation of several dwelling-houses and manufacturing establishments, which were threatened with destruction.

It is a curious fact that several hundred Rabbits, those shy and harmless tenants of the woods, ran from their perilous situation as the fire approached them: but encountering the face of man, they retreated, (such is the blindness of instinct) and perished in the flames.

The notorious Pirate captured.—We have this morning received the following pleasing information from our Philadelphia correspondent:—

"The United States brig Boxer, Capt. Elkton, has arrived at Havanna, from a cruise, after capturing the Carthagenian schr. Melor, commanded by the notorious pirate Mitchell; 80,000 dollars in specie, and other valuable plunder, was removed on board the Boxer, and the prize sent to New-Orleans for adjudication."

This intelligence is received by the Spanish brig Maria Doleras, in 17 days from Havanna.

FUNERAL HONORS.

The English Church has reserved for the dead the principal part of those honors which the Roman religion awards to them. In all the great towns, there are persons, called undertakers, who manage the funerals. Sometimes you read, on their signs over their shops—"Coffin makers to the King," or "Funerals performed here," as if it was a theatrical representation. It is indeed true, that representations of grief, have long constituted all the marks of it, which are to be found among mankind, and when nobody is disposed to weep over the remains of the deceased, tears are bought for the occasion. The last duties paid to the departed would, however, be of a sad complexion indeed, if stripped of the marks of religion; for religion has taken root at the tomb, and the tomb cannot evade her. It is right that the voice of hope should speak from the coffins; it is right that the priest of the living God should escort the ashes of the dead to their last asylum. It may be said on such an occasion that immortality is marching at the head of death.

DOCTOR CHISHOLM'S
Anti-Bilious Pills,

Of a quality superior to any thing of the kind ever offered as a GENERAL MEDICINE, in this Country.

NOW prepared from a recipe of the celebrated Dr. Chisholm, who, from a long residence in the West-India Islands, has been enabled to favor the world with the most complete history, and most approved methods of curing all the BILIOUS DISEASES of those warm climates.

This extraordinary Medicine, which now for the first time is finding its way into general practice, has properties in the highest degree superior to the mercurial nostrums so frequently recommended by the name of Anti-Bilious Pills. The extraordinary powers of this medicine as a solvent and evacuent of Bile, is without example; never producing debility or injuring the health, in the smallest degree, of the most delicate child or weakly female:

The BILIOUS HEAD-ACHE, so much complained of in this country, and in the neighbourhood of rivers, is often removed by a single dose, which, to a strong man, is only five pills, and to a weakly woman, three. The same dose will generally remove the most excruciating pains of the cholic, like a charm, by abusing the bile to pass downwards in the course of an hour or two.

Two or three Pills taken an hour before dinner, and repeated every third day, will effectually remove those diseases arising from flatulency and indigestion, and by persevering in the use of them for a considerable time, the appetite will be improved, and strength and vigor will return.

Two Pills taken at bed time, with a cup of penny-royal tea, and repeated every second night, will effectually remove Rheumatic pains wherever seated.

A single Pill, taken every fourth hour with a cup of flaxseed tea, will cure Pleurisy, promote expectoration, and relieve coughs and colds.

In CONSUMPTIVE CASES and DISEASES OF THE LIVER, no medicine ever yet discovered, has been known to perform such cures. Two Pills taken every third morning, will be found sufficient, unless costiveness prevails; in which case the dose may be increased according to the strength or constituton.

The Dysentery, Croup, and Summer Complaint on children, are soon relieved by a few doses. A single Pill to a child of 6 years old, and the dose increased according to their strength and age.

In Asthmatic or Phthisical cases, where the laborious breathing and great oppression, with faintings, are fast sinking the patient to the brink of the grave, a few Pills, taking one every hour, with fennel or pepper-mint tea, will often enable the patient to walk about in a few hours.

The above valuable Medicine is Sold ONLY in Pittsburgh, by

J. P. & J. W. SKELTON,
